The Cleveland Clinic Implements
Anodyne Therapy Treatment Programs

TAMPA, FL – September 19, 2005 - Anodyne® Therapy, LLC announced today that the Cleveland Clinic Health System is implementing use of the Anodyne Therapy System in their Home Health Agency, Wound Care Center and their Wooster Podiatry and Physical Therapy Clinics. The Cleveland Clinic Health System has been using the Anodyne Therapy System on an evaluation basis since April 2005 adjunctively with their advanced wound care protocols and physical therapy interventions to significantly increase circulation for wound healing, pain reduction and balance improvements – particularly in patients with peripheral neuropathy. Based on exceptional therapeutic results, they have decided to permanently implement Anodyne Therapy as part of their regular plans of care for those patients who would benefit from its use.

“We are thrilled that a health system with the stature of the Cleveland Clinic has recognized the significant therapeutic benefits available through the adjunctive use of Anodyne Therapy in a wide range of clinical indications,” said Craig Turtzo, CEO.

Anodyne Therapy treatments are currently available nationwide at more than 3500 outpatient therapy facilities, hospitals, nursing homes, physician offices and home health agencies to improve functional outcomes for patients suffering from peripheral neuropathy, chronic pain and a broad range of other health problems. Products are also available for convenient home use. For more information, visit www.anodynetherapy.com.
